SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 13.-The steamer China arrived early this morning from Yokohama and Hong Kong via Honoluiu. Up to the time the steamer left Honolulu Minister Willis had not made known his instructions from President Cleveland. Consequently, there was no disorder of any kind. The new minister arrived early on the morning of Nov. 4, and went directly to Mr. Blount's headquarters at the Hawaiian hotel. On Monday morning, Nov. 6. Minister Willis submitted to an interview, and his remarks left no doubt that he is duly accredited to the provisional government. He said: government. He said:

President Dole promptly replied to Minister Willis' note, and it was arranged that the United States envoy should present his credentials to the provisional government at 11 o'clock on Tuesday morning. an anomalous one, representing, as they do, a government which the United States is willing to see deposed. A severance of relations between the government and the legation would not be surprising.

The state department today received a cipher communication from Honolulu, telegraphed from San Francisco. After being translated by the experts here, Secretary Greaham took a copy out to Woodley for a conference over the matter with the president. Nothing was given out from the state department during the afternoon as to the substance of the dispatch.

out from the state department during the afternoon as to the substance of the dispatch.

The secretary of the Hawaiian legation was shown the Associated Press dispatch containing the news of Minister Willis' arrival in Honolulu and the appointment to present his credentials to President Dole. The news was obviously of great relief to the members of the legation, though they declined to talk. The plan of the legation evidently is to stand rigidly on the rights they have acquired by the recognition of their government. Minister Thurston yesterday, in Chicago, touched the marrow of their hopes, when he said that any attempt to overturn the present government by a foreign power would be an act of war. An act of war requires the consent of or a declaration by congress. Congress will undoubtedly take up the subject of Hawaii in some way immedately upon assembling in December. A fight, it is said, will be made on the administration on the ground that it has declared war without the consent of congress, and has therein done an unlawful act.

It still remains an unanswerable problem to those of diplomatic experience how an American minister accredited to the Hawaiian government can immediately upon the presentation of his credentials set about to destroy that government. This gives rise to many surmises—such as that the real policy pursued by the state department has not hitherto been an

This gives rise to many surmises—such as that the real policy pursued by the state department has not hitherto been announced at all, but that Secretary Gresham's report to the president is simply designed to give an opportunity to read public sentiment on the subject. One clear and certain result of the present incident would seem to be that annexation will never be profered to the United States by the Hawitana gain. If there is ever to the Hawaiians again. If there is ever to be annexation, the movement will origi-nate in this country.

Henry Clews, in his weekly financial ircular, says:
"The chief event of the week has been "The chief event of the week has been the elections occurring in ten states. As the issues were chieffly of a local rather than national nature, voting could hardly be viewed as having any direct bearing upon investment interests. And yet the remarkable uniform change in the vote from that of last year has been very naturally regarded as giving a certain degree of national significance to the outcome. Opinion is divided upon the reasons for this turn in the political weathercock. Some regard it as simply a new illustration of the popular habit of holding the government for the time being responsible for whatever misfortune may befail the country, no matter who or what may be to blame for it. Others think it expresses popular dissatisfaction with the party in power for delay and lack of unity in adopting the silver repeal bill. Others incline to the view that the anticipation of the effects of the new tariff caused the late depression, rather than the apprehensions connected with silver, and therefore regard the change of majorities as expressing dissatisfaction with the new tariff policy. While yet others think they find a solution in the revolt of the people against the wrongs and corruptions of machine' methods of party manazoment. These various explanations are, of course, influenced by party predilections, and an impartial observer would probably rule that no one of these causes alone accounts for the change, but that all have, in varying degrees, contributed to it.

"Be this as it may, the election was followed by a general temporary rise in prices, especially those of industrial stocks; but how far that was due to any serious importance being attached to these political influences it is not easy to say; for the previous speculative selling and some fail in prices had predisposed the market to an upward reaction, while reports came from London of an increase of gold in the Bank of England and a fall there in them arket rate of discount, and buying orders for bonds came from that center which it is hardiy s the elections occurring in ten states. Probably, the main consideration that largely affected Wail street was the reasonable probability that such an emphatic admonition to the party in power will make them more careful about excess in carrying into effect their disposition to introduce large changes in established business and in monetary conditions. Such an influence would very directly contribute towards the restoration of confidence in quarters where it is now much disturbed by pending and anticipated legislation; and to this we prefer to mainly attribute the effect of the elections in Wall street, for it is a legitimate contribution towards the restoration of confidence.

After the two great excitements of the silver struggle and the elections, there is a pause for rest, after which both sides will readjust their estimates and plans and doubt, he said, whether politics constituted cause. One district attorney had resisted removal, and the case was pending in the courts. So long as a doubt existed in his mind as to the power to remove before the expiration of the commission, Mr. Olney said he did not think it best to make any more removals. This opinion of the attorney general applies to district attorneys and marshals.

THE GOLD RESERVE.

Washington, Nov. 15.—A plan has just been perfected whereby the gold reserve of the treasury may be increased to its legal limit of $100,000,000. This is to be done by means of an understanding with the banks of New York, whereby they are to increase the proportion of gold in their deposits with the New York sub-treasury to cover certified checks that are presented by importers in payment of custom duties. The system now in vogue is for the banks to keep special deposits at the sub-treasury for this purpose, and heretofore the gold has not averaged more than I per cent. For such of them as belong to the purely investment class, the course of prices can hardly tail to be steadily upward. Pending the late crisis, large amounts of investments have been realized upon; the proceeds are still resting idle or earning nominal interest on transient loans; and, the silver danger having been removed, the owners of these funds may be expected to forthwin invest them in bonds or first-class dividentianyme. may be expected to forthwith lowest them in bonds or first-class dividently-paying stocks. A demand of that character is always followed by an improvement to the market for stocks; and that demand always goes by bounds and rebounds, which afford opportunities for transient operations. This tendency can hardly fail to show its effects upon the stock market at no distant day." no distant day.
